Tim Jackman to Retire as Previsor President and CEO in 2024

Tim Jackman, President and CEO of Previsor, a wholly owned subsidiary of MEM, will retire at the end of 2024 after nearly three decades with the companies.

“My experience at MEM and Previsor has been a rewarding one, paved with incredible milestones along the way,” said Jackman. “From achieving our initial AM Best rating in 2004, to our work to our expansion of services in other states, we have many accomplishments to be proud of thanks to the dedication and talent of our employees. It has been an honor to serve in leadership here.”

Jackman joined MEM in 1995 as General Claims Manager and became a member of the Executive Team as Vice President of Claims in 1997. Before becoming Previsor President and CEO in 2020, he served as Senior Vice President of Operational Services, having direct accountability for Customer Care, Safety and Risk Services, Claims and CompLegal.

In his time at MEM, Jackman led the formation of a captive law firm, CompLegal, to represent MEM policyholders, along with a reorganization of a managed care program aimed at facilitating a safe and successful return to work for injured workers.

Prior to MEM, Jackman worked for 14 years with Liberty Mutual Insurance Company, serving in various positions in multiline claims management. He holds a bachelor’s in business administration from Central Methodist University in Fayette, MO.
